Block parties: Saying cheers to cheap beers

- It may not be considered a happy hour under Massachusetts law, but it sure feels like one
- Downtown Crossing events offer cheap drinks, outdoor atmosphere as the work day ends

NICOLAUS CZARNCKI/METRO

Just after quitting time on a recent Thursday night, hundreds of people, many in business casual attire, gathered in an outdoor area in Downtown Crossing while eating free chips, listening to live music and drinking beers that cost $2 each.

While some patrons said they view the atmosphere and cheap drinks offered at the Downtown Crossing Block Party event as a happy hour, the laws of Massachusetts disagree.

There has been a statewide ban on happy hours — abbreviated times when establishments offer free or discounted drinks — since 1984. But the Downtown Crossing Block Party may be the happy medium to the regulations, which are currently being reviewed by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission since the passage of a new law that allows for free drinks at future casinos.

"Happy hour" regulations prohibit establishments from serving free drinks to patrons or from discounting the prices of drinks in the same day or same calendar week. Because the prices of beer ($2) and wine ($3) do not change during the time the Downtown Crossing Block Party is open, it is not considered a happy hour.

The block parties, organized by the Downtown Boston Business Improvement District, operate from 5-8 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays from late spring to early fall in a temporary space on Summer Street. There's no brick-and-mortar building to maintain or pay rent on, and no employees to pay to keep the establishment open for hours every day. The event, which is in its third year, has become increasing popular, attracting hundreds of patrons each night it is open.

Rosemarie Sansone, the president of the BID, said that so far there haven't been any problems at the free, 21-and-older event.

"We have a detail officer and people ... checking IDs," she said. "It's over at 8 p.m. and it's pretty well managed because there's quite a bit of security on hand and it's in a very public area."

The final block parties of the season are being held this week.

Cheap times

When asked why she came to the block party rather than a bar on a recent Thursday night, Erin Sinclair was quick with her answer.

"Cheap beer," she said, adding that it was "very, very strong" factor in her decision to head to the block party that night and throughout the summer.

She said if she and her friends were to go somewhere else downtown for a drink, they would end up paying $4 or $5 or $8 at places on the waterfront.

"Not a lot of places have that — to be outside and drink cheap beer," said Annie Nunziata who drank cans of Shark Top beer with Sinclair.

Another patron, Carlos Poveda, said he meets up with friends after work at the block party because of the outdoor environment, the live music and the beer prices.

"Two dollars? Can't beat that," he said.

MBTA GM likely to be selected today

BOSTON. Transportation Secretary Richard Davey told State House News that the two candidates for the MBTA's general manager position — Beverly Scott and Dwight Ferrell, both of Atlanta — would each have two hours to meet with the seven-member MassDOT board today, and he hoped they would be able to vote afterward.

▶ Who will be the next leader of the T?

Scott, who serves as MARTA's CEO and general manager, is not renewing her contract, while Ferrell, her deputy, was not chosen to succeed Scott at the transit agency.

"My hope is, yes, that we'll be able to make a decision after the hearing," Davey said. "Obviously if something comes up and we can't, then we'll have that ability to not take the vote, but it would be my hope to try to resolve the search." SHNS

Lynn priest put on leave amid sexual abuse allegations

LYNN. A Lynn priest was put on leave after church officials received allegations of sexual abuse against him, the Archdiocese of Boston announced yesterday.

The Rev. James Gaudreau was placed on an administrative leave of absence while the allegations are investigated.

Gaudreau has been pastor of St. Joseph's Parish on Union Street in Lynn.

The alleged sexual abuse of a child occurred in 2006, but was only recently reported, the Archdiocese said.

Once the alleged abuse was reported, the Archdiocese said, it notified the appropriate police department.

Gaudreau will remain on administrative leave without public ministry pending the outcome of a preliminary investigation by the Archdiocese. METRO

Burglary suspect has fancy taste

Boston police are trying to reunite victims of burglaries with various expensive jewelry pieces they believe had been taken by a Dorchester man accused of breaking into a South End home.

Police released pictures of the jewelry this weekend with the hope that the owners could identify them. Some of the items include a Tiffany earring, a pearl necklace and various other gold and silver watches and accessories.

The items were recovered when they arrested Michael Lockley, 53, after he was suspected of robbed a building on Worcester Square on Wednesday. Police traced Lockey's whereabouts by using the tracking system installed on a stolen iPhone.

He was charged with breaking and entering in the daytime. MICHAEL NAUGHTON

Pooch poisoner suspect arrested

Cops arrest landscaper who residents say attempted to poison Charlestown canines with antifreeze-laced hot dogs

Police said they arrested the landscaper who was allegedly spreading antifreeze-laced hot dogs on a lawn to poison dogs.

Kenneth Hyland, 53, of Everett, is expected to be arraigned today in Charlestown District Court. He was arrested Friday, police said.

A person reported to police that Hyland was cutting a lawn on Medford Street Sept. 16 and started spreading around the lawn pieces of hot dogs from a bucket with a blue-green solution in it, according to a police report.

The neighbor told police he or she thought the solution was antifreeze and confronted Hyland.

The neighbor asked Hyland if he was trying to poison the dogs and, according to the neighbor, Hyland said yes.

An argument ensued and the neighbor left, but returned to collect the hot dog pieces.

The neighbor alerted other residents of the incident and they went to the police station to report it.

The collected hot dogs were turned over to police as evidence and two detectives were assigned to investigate, according to the report.

Area dog owners are in disbelief over the incident and said they were "freaked out" by the situation.

'Loop'-eared man accused of stealing wallet

Transit police arrested a 23-year-old New Hampshire man Friday afternoon after, they say, he a woman's wallet at South Station.

The victim told police that she spoke briefly with a man she did not know before noticing that her wallet was missing.

She described the man as having large "loops" through his earlobes.

The suspect, later identified as Nicholai Dandurant of Hooksett, was outside the station when police asked him about the wallet. He is expected in court today to face larceny charges. METRO

Bike enthusiasts say they feel safe despite two cyclist deaths this month Thousands attend event

The city's bike enthusiasts came out in full force this weekend for the annual TD Bank Mayor's Cup Men's and Women's Races and Hub on Wheels ride.

Despite two cycling deaths this month, and recent Boston EMS statistics that show 451 bicycle-related incidents to date this year, cyclists said they are not afraid to hit the pavement.

"Very rarely do I feel threatened," said rider Jonathan Sampson. "Part of it is that I'm aggressive right back to [motorists]. I'll take the lane. I don't care ... I'll take the entire traffic lane if I need to to feel safe."

About 5,000 people turned out yesterday for the annual Hub on Wheels city-wide ride and bike-friendly block party at City Hall Plaza.

Like most of the cyclists Metro spoke to, Kate Janisch said she feels perfectly at home on her bike. They key, she said, is using good judgment.

Use your head

- Wearing a helmet reduces the risk of brain injury by 88 percent.
- State law only requires anyone age 16 or younger to wear a helmet while riding a bike.
- Cars are involved in only 10 percent of bike-related injuries.

— Brain Injury Association of Massachusetts

"I think that I'm a smart cyclist. I think that I'm very aware of my surroundings, and I usually go along the same routes, so I'm familiar with them. I think the people who are not paying attention — it's like they're riding a beach cruiser down in Florida — they just don't get it," Janisch said.

A 63-year-old man was killed by an alleged drunk driver while cycling in Dorchester just days before a woman in her 30s was run over by a tractor-trailer in South Boston last week.

Kristopher Carter, Boston Bikes' interim director, said the city is doing enough to keep cyclists safe.

"In the past four years we have added over 50 miles of bicycle facilities to Boston's streets and we have another 15 miles on the way this year," Carter said. "We will continue to grow our Bicycle Network as the number of riders continues to increase. The city is moving towards a more complete street framework to support all users of the roadway."

Man accused of stealing copper wire at T station

BROOKLINE. Transit police arrested a Medford man for allegedly stealing copper wire at Brookline Village station Friday night.

Robert O'Neil, 43, was reportedly "walking very stiff-legged" around 2 a.m. Friday when police caught up with him.

"O'Neil was walking this way for a good reason," transit police said in a statement. "... He had a large pair of cable cutters secreted inside his pants along with a pair of work gloves."

Police said a pile of MBTA cable cut into 5-foot sections was found piled on the track bed. METRO

THE TRUE STORY OF GECKO FEET

Your day-to-day life will soon be affected by the bottom of a gecko's foot. But when you hear "atomic physics," one of the last images in your mind would be a reptile.

But geckos have one of the most amazing adaptations in the animal kingdom. The bottom of their feet isn't sticky, but covered in tiny hairs like a rug. Each hair has up to 1,000 split ends. A single gecko has around two billion split-end tips.

When these creatures walk on a leaf, the atoms in the tip of each hair come close to the atoms in the leaf. When an atom in one object comes close to an atom in another, there's a tiny attractive force like unimaginably small magnets. This is happening now between your body and everything you touch. Humans don't notice because there aren't enough atoms in our rough skin close to other surfaces.

A gecko's two billion hairs achieve such a high level of contact, there is enough attraction between foot atoms and leaf atoms to support the gecko's weight, even with a single toe. They lift their feet by literally peeling the atoms in their toes away from atoms in other objects.

This atomic adaptation allows these creatures to run up the smoothest surfaces known to man without slipping. Geckos don't hold onto objects by friction, but by the total attractive force of atoms in close proximity.

Scientists can now mimic the fibers on the bottom of a gecko's foot artificially. Manipulating the number of hairs increases or decreases the amount of atoms in close proximity and strength of the material. A single piece of the strongest man-made gecko foot attracts atoms so strongly, a sticky-note sized piece can hold a weight of 660 pounds.

This means soon you will soon say goodbye to Velcro or nailing a TV to the wall. These materials will replace many of the adhesives in everyday life. This is a consequence resulting from a study of geckos walking on leaves. That is a true story of gecko feet. The world is not what it seems.

Iran accuses IAEA of passing nuclear secrets to Israel

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Iranian officials are worried the Russian-built Bushehr nuclear power plant could be vulnerable to saboteurs.

A senior Iranian lawmaker accused the head of the United Nations' nuclear watchdog yesterday of passing confidential information about Iran's nuclear activities to Israel.

In the latest sign of strained relations with the International Atomic Energy Agency, Javad Jahangirzadeh, a member of parliament's presiding board, said IAEA chief Yukiya Amano would be to blame if Iran reduced its ties with the body.

"Amano's repeated trips to Tel Aviv and asking the Israeli officials' views about Iran's nuclear activities indicates that Iran's nuclear information has been disclosed to the Zionist regime [Israel] and other enemies of the Islamic Republic," Jahangirzadeh was quoted as saying by Iran's English-language Press TV.

The IAEA was not immediately available to comment. Records show Amano has made only one visit to Israel in his capacity as IAEA chief, in August 2010. He visited Tehran in May this year.

"If the agency's actions lead to Iran cutting cooperation with this international body, all responsibility will be with the IAEA director general," said Jahangirzadeh, also a member of parliament's national security and foreign policy committee.

Last week, Iranian nuclear energy chief Fereydoun Abbasi-Davani said "terrorists" might have infiltrated the Vienna-based agency. He suggested the IAEA included too much sensitive information about Iran's nuclear program in its reports that he said could be used by saboteurs.

Western diplomats dismissed his allegations as an attempt to distract attention away from the agency's bid to gain access to a site in Iran it suspects was used for nuclear weapons research, something Tehran denies.

Iran blames Israel and its Western allies for the assassination of nuclear scientists in Iran. It also blames those countries for computer viruses that appeared designed to damage its nuclear machinery. REUTERS

Iranian general: Iran could strike preemptively

Iran could launch a preemptive strike on Israel if it was sure the Jewish state were preparing to attack it, a senior commander of its elite Revolutionary Guards was quoted as saying yesterday.

Amir Ali Hajizadeh, a brigadier general in the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps, made the comments to Iran's state-run Arabic language Al-Alam television, according to a report on the network's website.

"Iran will not start any war, but it could launch a preemptive attack if it was sure that the enemies are putting the final touches to attack it," Al-Alam said, paraphrasing the military commander.

Hajizadeh also said any attack on Iranian soil could trigger "World War Three."

Iran denies hacking American banks

Iran denied its hackers attacked American banks, the semi-official Fars news agency reported yesterday, following a Reuters report that three of the largest American lenders were repeatedly targeted over the past year.

The hacking of websites and corporate networks at Bank of America Corp, JPMorgan Chase & Co. and Citigroup Inc. began in late 2011 and escalated this year, people familiar with the situation told Reuters.

"We officially announce that we haven't had any attacks," head of Iran's civil defense agency Gholam Reza Jalali said.

Reuters reported the hackers targeted the three banks in retaliation for their enforcement of Western economic sanctions against Iran's disputed nuclear program.

Iran says the program is aimed at generating electricity and not, as the United States, Israel and others allege, at making nuclear weapons.

The Islamic state has beefed up its cyber capabilities after the nuclear program came under attack in 2010 by the Stuxnet computer worm, which caused centrifuges to fail at its main enrichment facility. REUTERS

Romney trailing behind in support from women

President Barack Obama's standing with white females has not improved even as his party has spent much of 2012 attacking Republicans as out of touch on women's issues.

But Democrats' rhetoric about a "war on women" has created doubt in the minds of white women about supporting the Republican ticket, hurting presidential nominee Mitt Romney with a demographic he must win.

It's a stark reality for Romney, who needs suburban women in his camp to offset Obama's lock on black voters and overwhelming support among Hispanics.

"It's possible that by election that vote will look very similar to 2008," said Kyle Kondik, political analyst at the University of Virginia Center for Politics. "But getting to 2008 numbers doesn't do it for Romney."

In swing states, Obama's attempts to rally women around social issues have received mixed results. In Virginia and Florida, Romney still leads Obama among white women but has seen a drop-off in support, while in Colorado and Wisconsin, he has picked up votes, according to recent Quinnipiac University surveys and 2008 exit polls. In Ohio, the gap is virtually unchanged.

Across those five battleground, Obama has either not seen a change or he has fallen out of favor with many white women. It's a fact Republicans think they can build on going into the final stretch of the campaign.

"I like our chances knowing that, versus the million and one hurdles that the McCain-Palin team faced in 2008," said Pete Snyder, who is leading the Republican Party's coordinated campaign efforts in Virginia. "If the challenge here is just up the ante a little bit more with white women and that's the path to the presidency, I like that as an issue for the next six weeks." STEVE CONTORNO, WASHINGTON EXAMINER

46 Percent of white women voters Obama won in 2008. A recent poll shows he now has 47 percent.

8 Romney is polling 8 points lower than McCain's 53 percent in the percent of women's votes he can win.

News in brief

Romney gets big fish bucks in Calif.

Having declared that his presidential campaign does not need a makeover, Republican Mitt Romney raised millions of dollars at two fundraisers in Southern California on Saturday to help bankroll the final weeks of the race.

"I'm not even going to be able to go home today. We're just coming to town to see you and keep the campaign going," Romney told a well-heeled crowd at the Grand Del Mar Resort hotel in Del Mar, Calif. Some 650 supporters — including diet guru Jenny Craig — paid from $1,000 to $25,000 a head to hear Romney's 40-minute speech in Del Mar. REUTERS

Labor force stats indicate many are just discouraged

Economists, analyzing government data, estimate about 4 million fewer people are in the labor force than in December 2007, primarily due to a lack of jobs rather than the normal aging of America's population.

If all those so-called discouraged jobseekers had remained in the labor force, August's jobless rate of 8.1 percent would have been 10.5 percent. The jobs crisis spurred the Federal Reserve last week to launch a new bond-buying program and promise to keep it running until the labor market improves. The labor force participation rate, or the proportion of working-age Americans who have a job or are looking for one, has fallen by an unprecedented 2.5 percentage points since December 2007, slumping to a 31-year low of 63.5 percent. CONN CARROLL

SENIOR EDITORIAL WRITER FOR THE WASHINGTON EXAMINER

CERTAIN IN LIFE: DEBT AND TAXES

Mitt Romney may be tied with President Obama in the latest Gallup tracking poll, but that has not stopped the liberal media from declaring the race over ... again. The pundits' latest excuse for writing off Romney is a grainy videotape from May in which Romney can barely be heard saying: "There are 47 percent of the people who will vote for the president no matter what. All right, there are 47 percent who are with him, who are dependent upon government, who believe that they are victims, who believe the government has a responsibility to care for them, who believe that they are entitled to health care, to food, to housing, to you-name-it. That that's an entitlement. And the government should give it to them. And they will vote for this president no matter what. ... These are people who pay no income tax."

Worse than most off-the-cuff remarks, that quote is a mess of overlapping, but very different, demographics, ideas and statistics. Let's untangle them a bit.

First off, Romney seems dead accurate on his estimation of how many Americans will support Obama this fall. Gallup has Romney and Obama both pegged at 47 percent in its latest poll.

But, even though 46 percent of Americans pay no federal income tax, not only do many of those same Americans pay payroll taxes, but many of them, including the working poor and senior citizens, are probably going to vote for Romney this fall. These people are not victims, and Romney should not write them off.

Romney is much more on target when he suggests that Americans are dependent on government like never before. According to the Census Bureau, 49 percent of Americans currently live in a household where at least one person received some type of government benefit. (Medicaid, Social Security, food stamps, Pell Grants, etc.)

But again, many of the people in this group — particularly Social Security and Medicare recipients — will be voting for Romney in the fall, too. And again, these people do not necessarily perceive themselves as victims. The federal government promised them that if they paid payroll taxes throughout their careers, then Social Security and Medicare would be there for them when they retired. Protecting these programs is no different than honoring a contract signed long ago. There is nothing more conservative than that.

Unfortunately, the federal government can't afford all the promises it has made. According to the 2012 Trustees Report, the Social Security system is already paying out $165 billion more in benefits than it will take in in taxes this year. The same is true for the Medicare Parts A, B, and D — programs that were $225 billion in the red.

Instead of fixing this existing entitlement fiscal disaster, Obama chose to create a brand-new one. Obamacare will cost $1.8 trillion during just the first 10 years. Obama has convinced the American people that all of this deficit spending can be paid for just by raising taxes on the rich. It isn't true.

According to Obama's own budget, his tax hikes will raise only $952 billion over the next 10 years. In the meantime, he plans to spend more than $40 trillion while adding another $6.4 trillion to our existing $16 trillion debt.

These numbers show why Obama's legislative affairs director, Rob Nabors, admitted to Bob Woodward, "You could raise all the taxes you want on millionaires ... and it would never raise enough."

The kernel of truth behind Romney's riff on the 47 percent is that our country simply can't afford Obama's spending plans without massive tax hikes on everyone ... even those who are currently struggling to get by while paying no income taxes at all.

Exit exams get a failing grade

New Center for Education Policy study questions increasingly difficult standardized tests for high schoolers
Doubts linger about college prep

Last week, the Center for Education Policy, a subsidiary of George Washington University in Washington, D.C., released its latest study on high school exit exams. To put the findings bluntly, the tests are getting harder.

A total of 25 states currently require seniors to pass a comprehensive exit exam before graduation. Of those, eight say their tests align with the Common Core State Standards, a higher exit exam level than any state has enacted previously. (The CCSS is a set of college-ready testing benchmarks, recently developed in part by the National Governors Association.) Ten more states say they plan to base their tests on the CCSS in the near future.

But, after more than a decade of studying exit exams, the Center for Education Policy still can't say whether they actually help students become better prepared for college.

"It's a huge question mark at this point," says Shelby McIntosh, who led the study for the CEP. "So, I think it's important to ask ourselves: What is being sacrificed in order to do this testing? For me, I know this kind of testing is very expensive, so the question isn't, 'Are students tested too much?' A better question is, 'Are states spending too much money in these areas, when they could be investing in something more beneficial to students?'"

BRUCE WALSH
bruce.walsh@metro.us

Demographics

The CEP also found that exit exams disproportionately affect low-income students.

"These policies tend to be more common in states that have higher populations of students that historically struggle more in school. About seven in 10 students, nationally, are impacted by exit exams. But it's more like 83 percent for English language learners," says McIntosh. "States have historically struggled to find the extra support that those students need. So, going forward, if the bar is raised even further, what kinds of support do states have planned?"

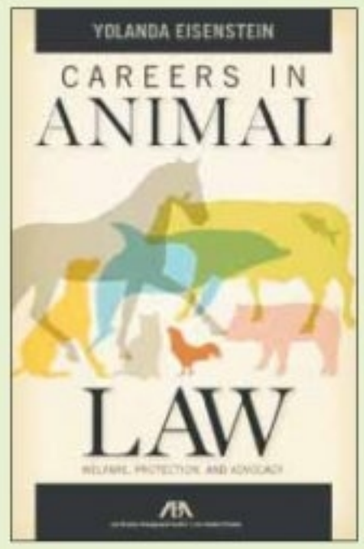
Bending the law degree

Around 2007, Yolanda Eisenstein starting looking for a way to put her law degree to work for a humanitarian cause.

"I wanted to start my own practice. I discovered an emerging area of the law, animal law, that really interested me, because I had always been an animal advocate," she explains. "I really had no idea that I could use my law degree in that area."

Today Eisenstein has her own animal law practice in Dallas, where she specializes in pet trusts, nonprofit law for advocacy groups and wrongful death litigation.

Recently, Eisenstein authored "Careers in Animal Law: Welfare, Protection, and Advocacy," the first guidebook of its kind released by the American Bar Association. "Careers in Animal Law" provides outside-the-box ideas on finding work in the field, from government positions and public policy analysis, to nonprofits and private practice. The book also includes 13 extended profiles of lawyers who specialize in animal law.



Eisenstein readily admits that animal advocacy is not currently the most profitable area of the law, but she sees it as one of the fastest-growing fields in the profession.

"I see a lot of comparisons to environmental law. When it started, most in the profession thought these lawyers were just a bunch of 'tree-huggers,' and no one saw it as a lucrative area of the law," she says. "But look at it now: It's become a very established, recognized area of the law. Unless you're my age, you don't even remember a time when environmental law wasn't taken seriously."

BRUCE WALSH

Degree options

The Lewis & Clark Law School in Portland, Ore., boasts the only animal law degree program in the country. Founded in 2008, the Animal Law Center at Lewis & Clark is affiliated with the Animal Legal Defense Fund. There are scholarships available, including a "litigation fellowship" awarded each year.

THE WORD

Metro's Dorothy Robinson shares her take on the world of gossip @dorothyatmetro dorothy.robinson@metro.us

Kellan Lutz is really into gum

It's all gum all the time for Kellan Lutz — with a few starring roles thrown in.

Last Wednesday, the "Twilight" star popped up at Helen Mills, a theater and event space in New York, to launch his latest endeavor: Being the enthusiastic spokesperson for iD Gum, a new brand of the chewy stuff which is geared to teens.

"Who would have thought 10, 20, 50 years ago that gum would be an accessory? Now it is. Now it's cool to show that you have gum versus hiding a piece of gum for your breath. Now it's like, 'Oh you've got some iD Gum?,'" the actor asked philosophically.

The collaboration between iD and Lutz isn't just for profit, mind you. "I only want to stay true to my brand and do great quality products, which this is. I'm a huge fan of the gum. I love gum," he told reporters about his decision to lend his name to iD.

Everyone is fleeing from Amanda Bynes

Things don't seem to be getting any better for Amanda Bynes. The actress has been charged with two counts of driving on a suspended license, according to TMZ. On top of that, the troubled former child star was reportedly dropped by her agent, publicist and lawyer — all within the last few weeks — because she's become "extremely difficult" this year. But a source close to Bynes says the actress isn't worried, since she's looking to transition from acting to fashion.

Right. Because fashion people don't need things like lawyers or publicists or agents. No reason to worry at all, Amanda.

Dude loves gum, amiright? So much so that even when we were able to get him off message to talk about what's next for his career, we couldn't help but read in between the lines (quotes in bold belong to The Word).

"It's bittersweet," he says about the end of "Twilight" [and possibly a new flavor of gum]. He continued: "It feels like closing a chapter but in a way it's like your last days of high school — you're really looking forward to college and I'm really looking forward to that [like I'm looking forward to this piece of iD Gum]. It's been great having my own project now, to [chew delicious gum and] be the lead in 'Tarzan' [a character who wasn't fortunate enough to be alive when gum was so accessible, but I think he chewed on pine bark of some sort]. Hopefully we can franchise that. It's going to be great [just like this piece of iD Gum I'm waiting to chomp on]."

Justin Timberlake heads to Cabo

Justin Timberlake knows how to celebrate. He was spotted with pals arriving in Cabo San Lucas, Mexico on Friday, where he'll reportedly spend a week with fiancee Jessica Biel and pals celebrating their impending nuptials, according to Us Weekly. The Mexican vacation began just hours after Timberlake hit up several nightclubs in Las Vegas for what sources are referring to as his bachelor party. Whatever the purpose of the night out, Timberlake "was a good boy," says a source who spotted him at one poolside club packed with models. "It was just him and his guys in their cabana."

Gaga talks weight, dad's new restaurant

Lady Gaga admits that she's put on some weight lately, but she's not stressing out about it. "I'm dieting right now because I gained, like, 25 pounds," she says in a radio interview, according to the Huffington Post. "And you know, I really don't feel bad about it, not even for a second." While she's had a rather hectic tour schedule, she says part of the cause may be closer to home. "I love eating pasta and pizza. I'm a New York Italian girl," Gaga says. "That's why I have been staying out of New York. My father opened a restaurant. It's so amazing, it's so freaking delicious, but I'm telling you I gain five pounds every time I go in there."

Hilton apologizes about gay slur

Paris Hilton is on damage control after a recording of her calling gay men "disgusting" went public last week. Hilton insists to gay rights group GLAAD that she "always will be a huge supporter of the gay community" in a public statement. "I am so sorry and so upset that I caused pain to my gay friends, fans and their families," she says. "I was having a private conversation with a friend of mine who is gay and our conversation was in no way towards the entire gay community." In chat, secretly recorded during a taxi ride in New York, Hilton said, "Gay guys are the horniest people in the world. They're disgusting. Dude, most of them probably have AIDS."

ABC/TODD WAWRYCHUK

Good times for great TV

▶ A fun Primetime Emmys show? ▶ Playful host Jimmy Kimmel made the unthinkable happen on a night when 'Modern Family,' 'Homeland' won big

With a wink and a nod toward everything the Primetime Emmys usually is — slow, boring and self-congratulatory — host Jimmy Kimmel injected life into the 64th edition of the awards show broadcast live from Los Angeles last night.

In the pre-taped opener, an over-botoxed Kimmel received a morale boost from an all-star cast of nominated funny ladies and presenters — including a naked Lena Dunham eating a birthday cake on a toilet — primping backstage for TV's biggest night. It was a smart, quirky and unexpected commentary on the evening, which Kimmel later summed up in his monologue: Ten hours of getting ready, heatstroke on the red carpet, no carbs in months, and it's all worth it to see if "So You Think You Could Dance" star Cat Deeley would win for best reality TV host (Tom Bergeron of "Dancing with the Stars" beat her for the statue).

It was all worth it for the cast and creators of "Modern Family" and "Homeland." The ABC sitcom, named best comedy, dominated the category, with additional statues going to stars Eric Stonestreet and Julie Bowen for best supporting actor and actress, and creator Steve Levitan taking the award for best direction.

Freshman Showtime series "Homeland" was named top drama, with its headlining duo also taking high honors: Claire Danes won for best lead actress, while Damian Lewis was awarded best lead actor. The series also took the statue for best drama writing.

AMBER RAY
amber.ray@metro.us

Other standout moments

Host Jimmy Kimmel sat between "Breaking Bad" stars Bryan Cranston and Aaron Paul — who won for best supporting actor in a drama — and asked if they had ever pondered what their AMC show would have been like before cable.

Cut to a black-and-white spoof on the opening credits to "The Andy Griffith Show," with Cranston and Paul's characters wearing their trademark hazmat suits — and carrying fishing rods to the 'ole swimming hole. Subversive and genius!

Three films cluster at top of American movie box office

Box office

RELATIVITY MEDIA

Police drama "End of Watch" and horror thriller "House at the End of the Street" tied for the top spot at the North American box office this weekend, with Clint Eastwood's "Trouble With the Curve" close behind.

The gritty "End of Watch," written and directed by the writer of 2001 crime drama "Training Day," David Ayer, brought in $13 million at U.S. and Canadian box offices.

"House at the End of the Street," which features Jennifer Lawrence in her first role since this year's blockbuster "The Hunger Games," also collected $13 million.

Baseball movie "Trouble with the Curve" was hot on the heels of the top films, taking in $12.7 million, according to box-office estimates released yesterday. The film is Clint Eastwood's first starring role in four years and comes less than a month after his headline-grabbing speech at the Republican National Convention.

The close finish among the top-three films was a reflection that the broad slate of new releases, each of which targeted a different demographic, divided up the moviegoing audience.

Futuristic action film "Dredd" disappointed with a mere $6.3 million on its debut weekend, failing to crack the top five.

Warner Bros., a unit of Time Warner, released "Trouble with the Curve." Relativity Media released "House at the End of the Street." Open Road Films, a joint venture of the AMC and Regal theater chains, released "End of Watch."

Sony Corp's movie studio released "Resident Evil: Retribution," which finished first last week and dropped to the fourth spot this weekend. "Dredd" was released by Lions Gate. REUTERS

Learning from 'The Master'

Amy Adams chats about her work with celebrated director Paul Thomas Anderson and why she's not concentrating on her latest film's Scientology angle

Amy Adams learned a lot on "The Master" — most surprising of which was probably how funny reclusive director Paul Thomas Anderson really is. "I thought it was going to be a very serious experience. And although we definitely delved into serious subject matter in the scenes, the experience of working with him was a lot more fun than I expected," she says.

The film, in which Adams plays the devoted wife of a charismatic cult leader (Philip Seymour Hoffman) wary of her husband's latest disciple (Joaquin Phoenix), has piqued curiosity because of its supposed similarities to the early days of Scientology and L. Ron Hubbard. But Adams says she isn't wading into that pool of discussion. "I guess that's for people to discover on their own. I didn't think about it a lot, nor was it something that I explored at great length when going into it," she says. "I always say, 'See the film, and then if that's something you're interested in, sort of finding the parallels, then you'll find the parallels.' But I just see it as more of a character study. I don't think that Paul was trying to make a movie about Scientology."

And when she says, "See the film," she means it. At the Toronto International Film Festival premiere of "The Master," Adams stayed glued to her seat even though it was the second time she'd seen it. "I hadn't seen it with an audience and everybody kept saying you need to see it twice," she says. "I'm typically too self-conscious to watch films that I participate in, but the first time through, I have to be honest, I did not clock my performance. It was so much more about where the film took me than how I felt about what I was doing."

Adams admits that working with Anderson and her co-stars caused more than a few "pinch me" moments. "It's surreal at times. I have to keep myself relatively grounded when I'm working or else I'll freak out," she admits. And one of the most surreal moments? Filming a scene in which Phoenix's character suddenly sees all the women at a party naked. "That was one of the weirdest nights of my life because I was right at [waist] level," she says. "The reason that it was so surreal for me is that typically when we see women naked in our society, aside from in life, they're acting like they know they're naked. Here the idea is that we're all acting like we have clothes on. So to see women of all ages and body types jumping around and dancing and very unself-consciously presenting themselves, that was so surreal because you just don't see that."

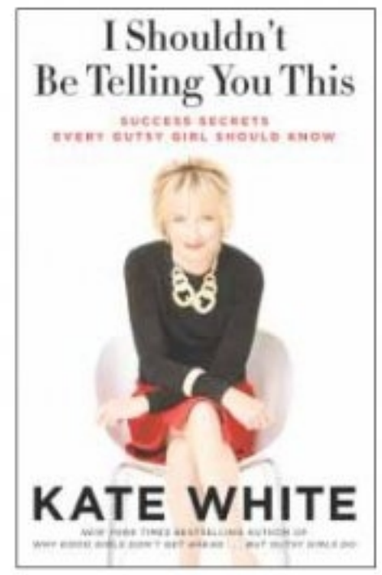
The secrets behind successful women

Author and former Cosmo editor Kate White on how to get what you want at work Be a 'Gutsy Girl'



Advice

DAN SCHAWBEL

PERSONALBRANDINGBLOG.COM

Kate White recently left her post as the editor-in-chief of Cosmopolitan magazine to write and speak full-time. Her latest book, "I Shouldn't Be Telling You This: Success Secrets Every Gutsy Girl Should Know," follows up her bestseller "Why Good Girls Don't Get Ahead...But Gutsy Girls Do." We caught up with her to talk successful female leaders and career advice.

What do you believe are a woman's greatest challenges in the workplace?

I think one of the biggest challenges for women in the workplace is improving their ability to ask for what they want — especially when it comes to money. In fact, studies show that women are significantly less likely to negotiate a starting salary than men are. Keep in mind that the person offering you the job often has more money to play with than he or she indicates. The goal is to get you on board at the lower end of the scale, but women need to be gutsy enough to say, "I would love to join the organization but I was hoping for X salary."

We are hearing about extremely successful female leaders, including Sheryl Sandberg (COO of Facebook) and Marissa Mayer (president and CEO of Yahoo!). What do you think made them successful?

I admire both of them. And I think they're wonderful models in that they seem to say there is no one best model for female success today. I strongly believe that you have to figure out what works for you. Sheryl Sandberg has said she leaves at five every day and has cried at work. That works for her. Marissa Mayer is starting a new job at seven months pregnant and that works for her. But those strategies may not necessarily work for you. I accepted a new and challenging job when I was seven months pregnant and though it worked out OK in the end, I wouldn't do it over again. Take inspiration from other women, study their strategies, but ultimately create your own blueprint based on your job, your needs, your family, etc.

"Keep in mind that the person offering you the job often has more money to play with than he or she indicates. The goal is to get you on board at the lower end of the scale, but women need to be gutsy enough to say, 'I would love to join the organization but I was hoping for X salary.'" KATE WHITE

STOCKBYTE

▶ Don't be afraid to ask for what you want.

White's top tips:

1. "Don't worry about whether people will like you. You don't have to be obnoxious, but you can't be afraid to speak up, showcase your accomplishments and take on projects others might want."
2. "Go big or go home with your ideas, even if you have to break the rules."
3. "In addition to excelling at your job, you have to be a relentless architect of your career and manage it even as you manage your job."

Don't be a jerk: Are you a mean boss?

Yelling, insults, unprofessional e-mails: It's not hard to spot the mean boss. But what if you are the boss? There's a difference between being a hard-to-please supervisor and short-fused tyrant. If you're losing your cool, maybe it's time to re-evaluate your techniques.

▶ There's a difference between being a hard-to-please supervisor and short-fused tyrant.

PHOTODISC

Get to the source

It's time to figure out what's really eating away at you. "Mean bosses need to understand at a very deep level what the triggers are that prompt yelling, insulting and other forms of torture," explains Nancy A. Shenker, career advisor and co-author of "Don't Hook Up With the Dude in the Next Cube." Additionally, she advises evaluating your employees and accepting that you could be part of the problem: Do you have them in the right positions? Could you have trained them better?

Understand the consequences of your short temper

You can't expect to be a grumpy boss and not burn a few bridges. "There is never a reason to be a nasty boss," says Leslie Austin, an executive coach at Austin Consulting. "It's bad business, creates bad blood and is always counterproductive to real productivity. And it's the fastest way to kill off any sense of cooperation or teamwork in an office group."

Take responsibility

If you want to fix your reputation as a mean boss, start by addressing the problem. "Meet with unhappy employees," suggests Amy Lieberman, author of "Mediation Success." "Acknowledge you could have handled a situation better, and apologize. When we are asked to forgive, we are more likely to consider bending." JULIA WEST

Zen in the city

GABRIELLE BERNSTEIN
WWW.GABBYB.TV

This past weekend I attended the Women and Power conference at the Omega Institute in Rhinebeck, N.Y. I was blessed to hear from leaders like Sally Field, Eve Ensler, Majora Carter and many more. Whether you're a woman or a man, I think you'll benefit from the discussions held there.

In the invocation speech, Omega's founder, Elizabeth Lesser, raved about the lineup of speakers and all of the empowering voices she's encountered throughout her career, including Nobel Peace Prize winners, spiritual leaders and world-renowned activists. Looking into the crowd, she said, "These leaders are no different than you are. We all have insecurities about speaking our truth and we're all just making it up as we go along."

This message resonated with me deeply. As a speaker and author I am out in the world sharing my voice and expressing it fully. Though I've created a platform for speaking my truth, I still have moments when I question my right to speak up. This weekend at Omega I realized I'm not alone. Field spoke of her fear of greatness, Carter admitted her fear of speaking about leadership and Ensler spoke of her need to be accepted. As I listened to some of the world's greatest leaders share their deep-rooted fears, I realized we're all in it together. In some way or another, we all question our right to claim our voice and share our beliefs with the world. Lesser calls this "imposter syndrome," the feeling of, "How dare I speak up? How dare I claim my power?" Our inner voice of fear, the imposter voice, holds us back and blocks us from owning our opinion, our voice and our power.

Our power cannot come from an outside credential — it must come from an internal condition. Carter said it best: "Listen to the voices that are telling you that you are powerful. It's your duty to share that."

Rather than see ourselves as separate from the world's great leaders, we must accept that we're all in this together. As Lesser said, "No one is sure, no one has the answer, but we need leaders who are willing to do something that has never been done before." If you deny the power of your inner voice, you deny the world of revolutionary change. If these women hadn't used their voices, we wouldn't have Ensler's V-Day global movement to end violence against women and girls or Carter's Sustainable South Bronx revolution or organizations like UNICEF and Planned Parenthood. What will happen without your voice?

The best laid plains of mice and Dems

RE: "LOOK BETWEEN (PARTY) LINES" (METRO, SEPT. 20) Letter writer Mike Treacy begins his letter with an appeal to reason and facts, but quickly degenerates to Karl Rove/Fox News partisan rant. Sorry, but the eight years of the Bush administration left this county in a shambles. That is why Obama was elected. It was no surprise! And he did have a plan, but when a congressman of the opposing party yells "Liar!" during the very first State of the Union address and the leader of the opposing party in the Senate states, "The single most important thing we want to achieve is for President Obama to be a one-term president," what chance do his plans have? No one did that to Bush — even though he was elected by the Supreme Court.

KATHY KOURIAN, VIA E-MAIL

Saturday's children are the real victims in today's society

RE: "ROMNEY VS. THE REST OF US" (METRO, SEPT. 20) Column writer Michael Frosch focuses on honesty as being the prescription for the health of a democracy,

What he misses is that his hero, Barack Obama, has not been honest. Did he not see the video from 1998 in which Obama confesses that he is a "redistributionist"? This is progressive-speak for taking my money and giving it to someone who has not earned it. My husband and I are members of the upper-middle class. Our tax bracket is comprised of 5 percent of all Americans. Yet we pay 40 percent of the nation's tab. We both come from single parent households and started with nothing. I have the privilege of keeping 40 cents out of every dollar I earn as a psychiatric nurse. On of the things that I have learned in my job is that while some are unable to work due to chronic mental illness, many others are products of Lyndon Johnson's Great Society and have neither the grit or motivation to better themselves.

Yes, democracy depends on honesty. It also depends on economic freedom and fairness. Why is it fair for me to pay so much and be vilified, along with Mitt Romney, because we are successful?

Romney's record is simply risky (and good) business

RE: "ELEPHANTS AREN'T THE ONLY ONES WITH A GOOD MEMORY" (METRO, SEPT. 21-23) Letter writer Brian Grau is accusing Mike Treacy and Republicans of lying, but he is immediately falling into the the same trap by stating that, "every company [Romney] bought has gone bankrupt."

Nothing could be farther from the truth.

Some of Romney's ventures were successes (can't name all due to space limitations — Staples, Sports Authority and Domino's certainly come to mind), and some were failures, but this is natural for any business that takes a risk.

Romney used his own funds for his investments, while Obama dumped taxpayers' money into Solyndra and similar failures, without a coherent business plan and accountability of the employees.

Horoscope

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Your way of doing things is likely to be superior to those of your associates, but you must be careful not to offend anybody who can't keep up. Don't complain or show off.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. When you are left to your own devices, you can be exceptionally good at working out tedious complications. If you have a problem to solve, seek a secluded place.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Show some kindness by helping a friend complete an important project. By doing so, you assure yourself of this pal's support down the line..

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. As the day progresses, deliberately loosen up a bit. Don't make everyone around you feel uncomfortable due to unwonted seriousness.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Try to conclude your business matters as early in the day as possible, because when you're rested you are likely to be thinking most clearly.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. If you and some friends are going somewhere and you plan to share expenses, you had better have a clear-cut understanding as to who pays for what.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Being too opinionated causes others to walk away and do their own thing. In order to attract friends, be open-minded and willing to go along with others' thinking.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. The day's events may cause you to get caught up with some essential last-minute assignments. Plan ahead, just in case you get stuck in the home stretch.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. If you're in need of some fun after work, go out with your pals but try to avoid crowed places. You'll enjoy yourself more in a place where you can chat intimately.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. A matter you've been anxious to get out of the way can be concluded to your satisfaction. However, in order to do so, you must make it a priority and not put it off for too long.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. By doing more listening than talking, you could learn something of extreme value. The secret is to find out what others know instead of trying to impress them with your wisdom.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Financial trends look to be exceptionally encouraging for you, not necessarily in terms of making additional money, but for more effective use of resources.

Saints stumble

The Chiefs knocked the Saints to 0-3 on the season with a three-point overtime win, 27-24. It was their first win of the young season. The Chiefs came all the way back from being down 24-6 midway through the third quarter. Chiefs running back Jamaal Charles ran for 233 yards and a touchdown on 33 carries in the win.

Revis banged up in Jets win

Jets star cornerback Darrelle Revis suffered a potentially serious knee injury yesterday in the third quarter of New York's 23-20 overtime victory over the Dolphins in Miami. Nick Folk's 33-yard field goal with just over six minutes left in the overtime period gave the Jets the road win. Dolphins kicker Dan Carpenter missed a 48-yarder just minutes before, which would have given the Dolphins the win.

Bills down Cleveland

The Browns are still seeking their first win, as the Bills went into Cleveland and walked away with a 10-point win. Quarterback Ryan Fitzpatrick led the Bills with 208 yards passing.

RAVENS 31 | PATRIOTS 30 Next Sunday: Pats at Bills, 1 p.m. CBS

▶ The Patriots and Ravens were involved in one of the nastier games in recent memory last night.

Holding a grudge

Things get testy early and often in rematch of AFC Championship game
Pats start off hot while Ravens make late run in a Sunday night classic

Three things we saw Sunday night against the Ravens:

1 DOWN TO THE WIRE

The Ravens late comeback attempt was fueled by Baltimore receiver Torrey Smith, who had a pair of touchdown grabs on the night. But Joe Flacco stole the show late, driving the Ravens to within field goal range with under two minutes left. Kicker Justin Tucker drilled a game-winner with two seconds left in the Ravens' 31-30 win. The Patriots led 27-21 heading into the fourth quarter.

With 11 minutes remaining and down by nine points, Baltimore went for it on 4th and 1. Jerod Mayo and Patrick Chung came up huge for the Pats as they stuffed Bernard Pierce to force the turnover on downs. Offensively, New England received great production out of Wes Welker and Brandon Lloyd as both had over 100 yards receiving.

2 STRONG START

The Patriots went into Baltimore with the underdog label attached to them, but taking a look at how things started, New England wasn't buying it. The Pats jumped out to a 13-0 lead in the first quarter, temporarily shell-shocking the Ravens in their home stadium. Undrafted rookie Brandon Bolden scored the team's first touchdown on a two-yard run, set up by a Steven Gregory interception of Joe Flacco that was returned back to the Ravens' 6-yard line. But Baltimore snapped out of it in the second quarter, erasing the Pats' lead with two touchdowns. New England would get the last laugh before halftime though, as Brady found the team's new favorite weapon, Julian Edelman, for a score.

3 DEFENSE? WHAT DEFENSE?

Through the first two games, New England's defense was a major bright spot. It looks like the bright lights of Sunday Night Football got to them a bit this time around, however, as the Pats were sharp early on, but let Baltimore pick away at them in the second and third quarters. The Ravens had not one, not two, but three touchdown drives of 80-plus yards or more during the second and third quarters. That's certainly not going to cut it.

SNORING?

As recommended by Dr. Gifford-Jones M. D.

#23

Here is proof that snoring can be corrupting your health and your marriage. Three out of 10 couples are considering divorce because of snoring says a major magazine article. You are not alone! An official survey says 48% of all people snore. 75% are affected, if you add non-snoring husbands that have snoring wives or vice versa. Snoring is caused by slack muscles in the throat. A common complaint is that people feel that they are not well rested in the morning. Many people wrote they are now sleeping like a babies. Their partners are delighted. This natural health product Sound Sleep #23 usually helps the first night. No side effects.

■ College professor had lack of good sleeps with many interruptions for last 8 years that made her tired during the day. Within 3 days taking Bell Sound Sleep #23 the terrible snoring stopped. ▶ Chris Davis and the Orioles have left the Red Sox in the dust this season.

Crunch time

Division and wild card races are heating up around the Majors:

- The Orioles and Athletics lead the AL wild card race. Oakland was 2.5 games up on the Angels and 3.5 up on the Rays as of yesterday.
- The White Sox lead the AL Central by just a half game as of yesterday with the Tigers in hot pursuit.
- The Yankees were up on Baltimore in the AL East standings by one game as of yesterday. Their 88 wins are topped only by Texas (89) in the American League.
- The Nationals, Reds and Giants are all headed to the postseason in the NL. The Braves, Cardinals, Brewers, Dodgers and even Phillies are still very much alive in the wild card race. Oct. 3 is the final day of the season.

Sox may take cue from O's

Former Sox GM Dan Duquette thriving in Baltimore ◐ Orioles haven't faded ◐ Winning with low payroll

The Baltimore Orioles came into Fenway Park this past weekend at the top of the American League Wild Card standings. Despite being at the top of the standings for most of the season, many expected them to fall off at some point like they have in the past.

This didn't happen as the Orioles have managed to put together their first winning season since 1997. Perhaps with the Red Sox looking to rebuild this offseason, they can look to the Orioles on what a winning, playoff contending roster looks like.

"We believe in what we have," said outfielder Endy Chavez, an 11-year major league veteran, to Metro Boston. "No one was expecting our results, but we know we have the fight, heart and dedication to do what it takes to win. I think that is what has put the team in a good position to win and we'll see what happens."

One of the keys for the Orioles this season has been their ability to win the close games.

Quoted

"(Showalter) knows it is very important for him to have the team that he has and control the pieces how he wants. He is doing a great job."

ORIOLES OUTFIELDER ENDY CHAVEZ ON MANAGER BUCK SHOWALTER

Going into Sunday's series finale, the Orioles were 27-8 in one-run games. After Saturday's extra innings win it increased their extra innings win streak to 16 games.

"A lot of it has to do with the depth we have in the bullpen. We get into these extra innings games our bullpen holds them down and unerringly we get a timely hit," said Orioles general manager and former Red Sox general manager, Dan Duquette on WEEI's Big Show Friday afternoon.

After four seasons of finishing in last place in the American League East, Duquette was brought in as general manager to turn the franchise around.

"With the Orioles it has been about changing the culture," Duquette said. "Buck [Showalter] has done a good job. The players that we have kept on the roster, and we've gone through our fair share of players, they've had mental toughness, are very resilient and have a short-term memory. These are the kinds of individual trails you need for ballplayers to have to build a competitive team."

Baltimore has had all of this success with a payroll of approximately $76.7 million, not having one player hitting over .300, and only having one pitcher with double-digit wins.

Memory Pill Does for the Brain What Prescription Glasses Do for the Eyes, Claims US Surgeon General Candidate

Remarkable changes observed, helps restore up to 15 years of lost memory power in as little as 30 days!

SPOKANE, WASHINGTON –

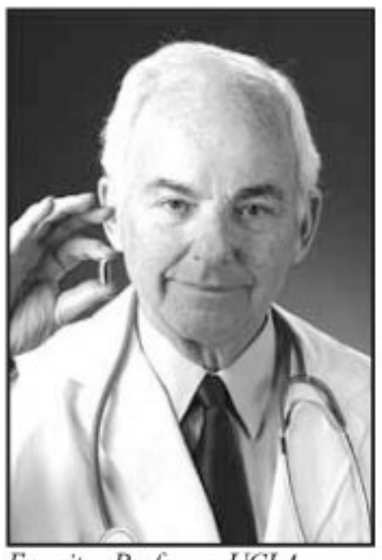
Help is on the way for those who routinely lose their car keys, forget to call people back, or misplace their TV remote control.

Just like a good pair of glasses can make blurry vision, sharp and crystal-clear, there's a new, doctor-recommended memory pill that can do the same thing for your brain, sharpening your memory and mental powers, and making that slow-thinking, sluggish brain as sharp as a tack.

In controlled research studies, the prescription-free formula, known as Procera AVH® has been shown to increase memory, mood, and mental clarity, but it does much more than that.

Time Travel for Your Brain?

If you have ever dreamed of traveling back in time, this drug-free compound may be the next best thing.



Emeritus Professor, UCLA Medical School, Robert Heller, MD, uses and recommends a drug-free method to increase memory, mental focus and concentration.

During research trials at the prestigious Brain Sciences Institute, clinical researchers witnessed a remarkable transformation in study participants' brains.

Over a period of a few weeks, scientists observed the formula "biochemically coaxing" aging brains to function more youthfully, helping restore the speed, memory abilities and mental powers enjoyed as far back as 15 birthdays ago.

Younger Brain in 30 Days?

If the results of this randomized, double-blind, placebo controlled study, published in JANA, a leading scientific journal, are to be believed, it is entirely possible that you can get your new, younger-functioning brain in as little as 30 days.

This is old news for Robert Heller, MD, Emeritus Professor UCLA Medical School, who uses and recommends the formula

"It's not a drug," says Dr. Heller, "it's a nutritional supplement that can help a foggy, sluggish brain become a sharper, quicker, and healthier brain."

Wake Up Call for Tired Brains

For years, Dr. Heller looked for an effective solution to patients' complaints about mind and memory.

"I searched for a remedy or treatment that could help my patients, even friends and family, regain the memory and mental sharpness we all seem to lose with age. I am quite happy to now recommend Procera AVH as it gives the brain much needed support against free radicals, inflammation and improve the decline in neurotransmitters, and blood flow and oxygen."

"It's like reading an eye chart with the right pair of glasses instead of an old pair of lenses. Everything comes into focus, your brain is more crisp, more focused, clearer, and sharper."

Dr. Con Stough at the Brain Sciences Institute concurs, "It's a fairly unique, fast-acting process that pumps the brain full of more energy, improves blood circulation to the brain and increases the key neurotransmitters that are responsible for cognitive functioning."

A randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled study on what may be the world's first truly effective memory pill was conducted at this university research facility.

Elizabeth K. of Rochester, New York experienced a night-and-day difference in her mind and memory.

At the age of 54, her memory was declining at an "alarming rate."

"I was about to consult a neurologist when I read about Procera AVH." Elizabeth decided to give it a try.

"It took about a month for the memory benefit to kick in. Six months later, even my husband was impressed with my improved memory. And I am very happy with my renewed mental clarity and focus!"

A 'Bonus' Effect?

Elizabeth was pleasantly surprised with one of the formula's 'bonus effects.'

"Within a week I felt a wonderful change in my mood. It was such an unexpected bonus," smiles Elizabeth.

Pharmacist Gene Steiner, Pharm.D, was relocating to another state and was apprehensive about taking the state board of pharmacy jurisprudence examination, a daunting examination that tests a candidate's mastery of pharmacy law.

Dr. Steiner took Procera AVH daily for two weeks prior to the test, and passed with flying colors. "The recall I experienced was near fantastic," says Steiner.

Curiosity piqued, Dr. Steiner did his own research to learn more about the formula

He read about a US cognitive researcher who had taken a new approach to treating memory loss, addressing the "energy crisis" that occurs naturally in human brains around the age of 40-50.

Author, researcher, preeminent brain expert, and lead formulator for Procera AVH, Joshua Reynolds, explains, "One-third of your brainpower may be lost by the age of 40, and 50 percent may be lost by the age of 50!"

Half-Blind... and Can't See It

"If you were to lose half your vision, essentially go half-blind, you would surely notice it," says Reynolds.

Days before seeing a neurologist for her "alarming rate" of memory loss, 54-year-old Elizabeth K., Rochester, New York, discovered a natural memory pill that changed her life.

"But the gradual loss of mental acuity and brainpower over many years may be too subtle for people to notice."

This explains why many Procera AVH users seem surprised at the effects.

Mark S. in Alego, Texas, was worried about being at his best during sales calls.

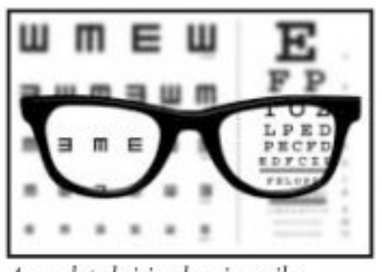
"I really needed something to help with mental clarity, focus and memory. I have to be at my best when I meet with clients."

Shortly after he started taking Procera AVH, Mark was amazed at how sharp and mentally focused he was during his appointments.

"It was definitely a noticeable difference. I was very pleased with Procera AVH and happy to know it will help me stay at my best."

Neural Pathways, Energized!

Three clinically validated brain energy nutrients in Reynolds' formula have been shown to "light up aging brains like a Christmas tree."



Age-related vision loss is easily corrected with glasses. A novel drug-free compound has been found to help restore age-related memory loss and poor mental focus in as little as 30 days.

Procera revitalizes tired sluggish brains cells with a fresh supply of oxygen and key vital nutrients. Plus, it helps restore depleted neurotransmitters, which increase and enhance alertness, concentration, and memory.

"We included acetyl-l-carnitine, a natural modified amino acid with a proven record of memory enhancement," says Reynolds.

"It's the same brain nutrient found in cold-water fish, but you'd have to eat over 20 servings of fish to get what's in one daily dose of Procera AVH."

The formula also contains vinpocetine, a substance that helps deliver increased oxygen and glucose to your brain.

"Vinpocetine helps increase circulation in the brain, so your brain feels more alive, like a breath of fresh air," says Reynolds.

The third ingredient is huperzine, a potent plant chemical shown to improve learning and memory at all ages.

"Students can do better in school when they take it," adds Reynolds. "And the US government has been studying huperzine's neuroprotective powers against the brain-damaging effects of pesticides in food."

Selwyn Howell credits Reynolds' memory pill with bolstering his confidence.

"It helped me speak out more than I used to. I am growing more confident every day."

Carey S. reports, "I feel so much more focused and with the new energy I'm now ready to tackle the things I've been putting off for years!"
